Quick Reference Guide

To assist with harassment, discrimination and child protection issues in sport and recreation

www.playbytherules.net.au

Introduction

Sport and recreation organisations across the country regularly deal with a range of harassment, discrimination and child protection issues involving players, coaches, officials, parents and spectators.

This Quick Reference Guide shows where you can find the essential information and services to help you address and resolve these issues, including:

- referring illegal or unlawful behaviour
- promoting a positive, child safe environment
- making and resolving complaints.

The guide also includes links to key sport and recreation bodies, government agencies and non-government organisations, along with a short description of the support they can provide.

- Sport and recreation organisations: National
- Sport and recreation organisations: State and territory
- Police
- Child protection/child welfare agencies
- Drugs in sport/integrity in sport
- Equal opportunity and anti-discrimination agencies
- Dispute resolution and mediation services
- Legal services and advice
- Counselling/support services.

Making and resolving complaints

Every sporting organisation needs an effective procedure for managing complaints. Sometimes different processes will be required to resolve a complaint, depending on the nature of the complaint, the organisation's legal requirements and the individuals involved. Your Member Protection Policy should contain all the procedures for managing complaints. Refer to your state/territory association or national governing body if you do not have a Member Protection Policy.

The Play by the Rules website has information on making a complaint, being complained against and dealing with a complaint. It also has a free online training program on complaint handling, including videos on the complaints process.

Making a complaint

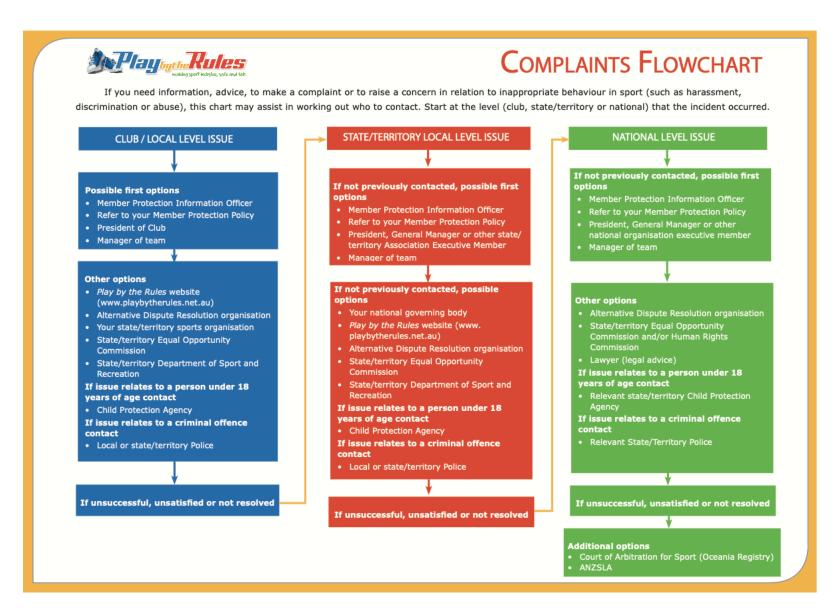

Sport should be a place where you enjoy yourself, develop friendships and have fun. It's not a place where you should be subjected to discrimination, harassment or abuse. If this behaviour occurs, you have every right to make a complaint. The Complaints Flowchart on page 7 can help you work out who to contact and how a complaint may be resolved. It sets out scenarios for resolving complaints that involve issues at:

- club/local level
- state level
- national level.

More information or advice

There are a range of groups that can provide specialist advice and service to help individuals and organisations resolve a complaint or deal with conflict:

- Dispute resolution and mediation services in your state or territory.
- Australian Human Rights Commission or your state or territory's equal opportunity agency (for complaints involving discrimination, harassment or victimisation).

You can download a copy of the Complaints Flowchart at

Organisation	Services	Contact
State and territory Children's Commissioners and Children's Guardians	A children's commissioner works to improve and ensure better services for all children. A children's guardian works solely to help improve the services for children in the care of a department. Not all states and territories have a commissioner and a guardian. In most states and territories, the commissioner also acts as the guardian. Queensland and NSW have separate commissioners and guardians. South Australia has a children's guardian and no children's commissioner. These agencies promote and protect the rights, interests and wellbeing of children and young people, especially vulnerable children. Some are responsible for conducting Working with Children Checks on people employed in positions where they have direct contact with children.
